BEUCHERT'S LIBERTY FIVE DEFEATS EAST KINGSTON.

Joe Beuchert, one of the most popular basketball managers in this section, led his fast stepping Liberty Five to a win over East Kingston by a score of 37 to 16. ## CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATRES

Rarely it happens that a star can follow one nationally famous screen success with another even greater. It has remained for Norma Talmadge to achieve that with "The Eternal Flame," now playing at Keeney's until Saturday. Keeney's symphony orchestra accompanies the entire presentation.

"The Ninety and Nine" at the Kingston Opera House again, tonight and Saturday has more thrills and human interest than even the most recent success. "Hearts of Flame," Larry Seamon in a lively comedy "Golf" is the added attraction.

Eileen Sedgwick in "The Wolf Pack" is showing at the Auditorium tonight, also Baby Marie Osborne in "Cupid by Proxy." Saturday Herbert Rawlinson in a lively detective mystery play "One Wonderful Night." Today is the last showing of "When Love Comes," featuring Helen Jerome Eddy at the Orpheum Theatre. The vaudeville bill which pleased three large audiences yesterday will be repeated again today and tomorrow.

SALVATION ARMY ON THE JOB: SHOVELERS LIKE THEIR COFFEE

Memories of the cold bleak days during the war were made vivid again Thursday morning when the local Salvation Army officers were seen with large pots of steaming hot coffee, serving the men who are so ably ridding the city streets of the great heaps of snow. "Well, I'll say," said one man between sips of hot delicious beverage. "This reminds me of the time when you brought me coffee before and came right up to the trenches, as you are now climbing the snow heaps."

"Now who ever would have thought how much easier we could work with a hot cup of coffee in us," said a big rosy faced man, whose moustache hanging heavy with tiny icicles, began to thaw out to its natural state.

It would seem as though the snow will be carted away with enthusiasm if these measures are carried out.

The rink, conducted under the direction of John Reosa, formerly a member of the New York city mounted police force, is 300 feet long and 285 feet wide. There is absolutely no danger as the ice is frozen solid. The rink will be open from 1 o'clock until 11 o'clock at night and every day there is skating. Trolley cars will carry the notice. Trolley cars run to within a few feet of the entrance, making the park very accessible. A special orchestra will be in attendance and the best of order will be maintained at all times.

CAR OWNERS MAY PAY FOR JOY RIDERS' CRIMES

Senator Antin, Hurt Himself, Introduces Bill.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Jan. 19.—Owners of automobiles who allow the use of their cars for joy riding will be held responsible hereafter for any damages done while the vehicle is being operated by another person, if a bill introduced by Senator Benjamin Antin Thursday, is adopted.

At the extraordinary session of the 1922 legislature, last August, while Senator Antin was crossing State and Pearl streets here, he was struck by an automobile operated by the son of the owner who lives in Tannersville, who put in the defense of denying legal control of the machine at the time of the accident. Senator Antin was taken to the hospital at the time, and remained there ten weeks, having suffered concussion of the brain, fracture of several bones and serious injuries to his spine.

Suit was brought by Senator Antin against the owner of the machine for $50,000, but under the statutes of the state, as they exist now, while there is no question of criminal and contributory negligence in this instance, there cannot be a verdict for him because the father stated that his son operated the car without his permission.

It is this defect in the civil practice act that Senator Antin seeks to remedy. The proposal is generally approved by various bar associations of this state.

NO FUEL, SCHOOLS ARE CLOSING

Alligerville Closed, High Falls Next—Four Cars of Coal There Since Last May—Snow Too Deep To Get Wood Out.

A man attending county court who resides at High Falls stated this morning that fuel conditions are very serious in his section. There has been but four carloads of coal there since May, and it is very difficult to get any fire wood. He stated he measured up a load of sawed and split wood for a neighbor a few days ago and that the buyer paid at the rate of $23 a cord for it. The Alligerville school has been closed because of inability to get wood to heat the school room, and it is expected that the High Falls school will be closed after this week because of there being no wood or coal to be had. The snow is so deep in the woods that it is impossible to get the wood out.

FILM WORLD MOURNS REID

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Los Angeles, Jan. 19.—"Tell them, mamma, I have won—I have come back."

They were the last words of Wallace Reid, stricken motion picture star, uttered to his wife, Dorothy Davenport, during the last moments of consciousness before the coma which ended in death last yesterday, had enveloped him.

He referred to his battle against drugs. His last conscious thoughts were that his friends should know that even in death, he had won.

The studio world that knew Reid as a friend and companion and the film loving public that delighted in Reid's effervescent portrayal of youth in hero roles, joined in sorrowing today over his passing.

Messages of sympathy poured in to the De Longpre avenue Reid home, where Dorothy Davenport, his wife, was in a virtual state of collapse as a result of her overpowering grief and from the strain of the month's long vigil she had kept with Wallie in aiding him in his fight against drugs and then to regain his health. The messages came from stars and fans alike—many from Europe.

Funeral services will be at an Episcopal Church tomorrow, with joint services by the Episcopal Church and Elks' Lodge No. 99, of which Reid was a member. The exact hour will be announced later. All Hollywood studios will be closed tomorrow.

POUGHKEEPSIE'S NEW FERRYBOAT IN TROUBLE

After having been placed on a regular run for several days, the new electric ferry "Poughkeepsie" has been taken off and is now tied up at the dock undergoing repairs which will take about two days.

The trouble with the new ferry seems to be in the valves, it is stated, so now the officials of the ferry company are having the valves ground down. After the repairs are made they intend to wait until there is more ice in the river before putting the boat on the regular run again. The idea of waiting until there is more ice is to make sure that the ferry is fully capable of doing what was expected of it.

ELLENVILLE FIRE VERY DESTRUCTIVE

Boarding House Of J. Messite Is Totally Destroyed—Proprietor Is Badly Burned And His Son Has Feet Frozen—Mistook Gasoline For Kerosene.

The Ellenville Journal says: The large boarding house of J. Messite on the Cape Road burned to the ground about six o'clock Wednesday morning. Mr. Messite and his son were alone in the house at the time, Mrs. Messite having gone to New York the day before.

As near as we can learn the details, Mr. Messite was starting a fire in the kitchen stove and went to put some kerosene on to help it along. Instead of kerosene, however, he picked up a can in which painters had put some gasoline the day before. The stuff immediately flamed up, setting Messite's clothing on fire. He threw the can to the floor and running outside jumped into a snow bank, thus extinguishing the flames on his person. Meanwhile his dog ran upstairs and by his barking aroused the son, who jumped out of a window and ran in his bare feet to Mr. Finkelshtein's, the nearest neighbor, for help.

The fire had such headway, however that nothing could be done and the large boarding house was a total loss.

Dr. Weiss of Ellenville was called and found that Mr. Messite was very severely burned about the neck and face and on his hands. His son is also suffering from frozen feet as a result of his barefoot trip through the snow.

Tough luck all 'round, especially with the temperature down to zero.

ONE OR TWO HIGH SCHOOLS FOR NEWBURGH?

The proposed plan of the Board of Education of the city of Newburgh to bond the city for the sum of $975,000 for the purpose of purchasing a site for, and building a new high school is meeting with some strenuous opposition upon the part of some of the citizens.

The opposition maintains that $112,000 is too much to pay for the proposed site. They also hold that a smaller structure should be built to accommodate the students in the upper section of the city and that the present structure be maintained for the students in the lower section. Kingston having at one time had such an arrangement might give some advice.

TROOPERS HAVE RUN HOBOS OUT

With Saving of $500,000 in Fire Insurance Reports Colonel Chandler—Enforcement of Highway Laws Greatest Problem.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Jan. 19.—New York state is rid of tramps.

Fire insurance companies estimate $500,000 a year is saved by the decrease in fires formerly caused by the presence of tramps in barns.

This is the outstanding feature of the annual report of New York state constabulary, submitted to the legislature today by Lieut. Colonel George F. Chandler, superintendent.

Chandler declares his men have driven tramps out of the state, and have broken up organized chicken stealing, and the robbing of truck gardens.

During the five years the state troopers have been in existence, a total of 43,129 arrests have been made, with nearly 90 per cent convictions.

The enforcement of highway laws is the greatest problem confronting the troopers, Colonel Chandler declares.

"When one considers," he said, "that the automobiles licensed in this state together with the visiting machines from other states, would, if placed end to end, make a continuous chain of cars extending from New York through Albany to Buffalo nine times, one can understand the enormous amount of motor traffic in this state."

Col. Chandler says it isn't speed which causes automobile accidents. "More accidents occur," he said, "where motors are going under 15 miles an hour than over."

Regarding industrial disputes in which the troopers have participated, Colonel Chandler says:

"Unfortunately there has been considerable disorder resulting from industrial conditions in the state, and this department has been called upon frequently to aid the local authorities, but no innocent bystander has been shot or killed."

N. Y. HARBOR MEN AUTHORIZE STRIKE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Jan. 19.—At a meeting of the Associated Marine Workers, composed of men employed on tugboats and steam lighters in this port in Union Hall, 12 St. Mark's Place, last night it was voted to strike at 6 a. m., Friday, February 2, unless their demands for a new wage scale are granted by the independent boat owners. This will involve about 3,000 men and 400 tugs, the vessels being owned by 325 different individuals or companies.

Under the new scale captains and engineers demand a 40 increase a month in their present wages. Others affected are masters, mates, pilots, engineers, oilers, firemen, deckhands and cooks. The unionized men ask a wage increase averaging $25 a month.

License men are now drawing from $150 to $250 a month, while unlicensed workers get from $65 to $95 a month.

TRACTOR OPENING RURAL HIGHWAYS

Ashtokan Road Is Open to Stony Hollow—Business Here Slows Up With Absence of People from Country.

Very few people are coming to town by autos because of the bad condition of the roads and in consequence there has been a falling off in business at the stores. The Saugerties busses continue to make about all their scheduled trips, and the Schipp bus is running to and from High Falls by way of Rosendale. The Ellenville-Kingston highway was gone over by the caterpillar tractor from Hurley to the Marlborough line, and County Superintendent J. F. Loughran expects to open the road to Stone Ridge today or tomorrow. He has run the tractor from the Higginsville bridge as far as the viaduct near Stony Hollow and will endeavor to open the highway from that point to the Boulevard to Ashokan and beyond. The tractor and snow plow has cut a track on the cross roads to Katrine and Ruby so people living along that route can reach the Saugerties road. Unless there is another heavy fall of snow County Superintendent Loughran expects to have most of the roads leading to this city opened sufficiently for sleigh and auto traffic by Saturday night.

LAW ANSWERS SMITH'S CHARGES

Tax Commissioner's Friends Jubilant, Claiming Governor's Every Accusation Off.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Jan. 19.—Every specific charge of inefficiency made by Governor Smith against Walter W. Law, Jr., of Westchester, chairman of the state tax commission, was answered by the commissioner at a hearing before the governor this afternoon. The executive chamber was filled to capacity with Republicans and Democrats. A large number of prominent Albany society women were present.

At the opening, the governor indicated there would be no decision before next week.

The governor charged Commissioner Law with having exceeded his appropriations by $255,000. Law denied this, and submitted an estimate, which he said would show he had $240,000 to spare after operating the tax department for the first six months of the last fiscal year.

Law asserted he would be able to conduct the work of the department to the close of the fiscal year, June 30, without a "deficiency" of one cent.

The commissioner contended three laws passed by the last legislature, and for which no appropriation was made, had imposed additional burdens on the tax department.

Commissioner Law denied an assertion by the governor that he (Law) planned the finances of the tax department so there would be a deficiency for the last six months of the fiscal year.

"I didn't do any such thing," Law declared.

Several times Law was prompted by his counsel, former Senator Edgar T. Brackett and J. Arthur Leve of New York. When the governor asked Law why he created new positions last August, with salaries totaling $17,800 annually, he replied:

"To take care of the additional work imposed upon the tax department by laws passed by the last legislature."

Law contended he asked for an appropriation of $2,719,505 to conduct the tax department, instead of $2,488,908 as charged by the governor.

"I couldn't help it, because the budget committee trimmed down my request," said the commissioner.

In his formal complaint, the governor charged Law with permitting collusion between employees in the automobile license bureau in New York city, and "outsiders" in the issuing of license plates.

Law denied this, saying the only person who ever received his automobile license out of turn, was the comptroller of New York city.

Just before the hearing closed, the governor denied a request by Senator Brackett to call "several witnesses," to "corroborate the statements made by Mr. Law."

"That isn't necessary, this is a hearing, not a trial," said the governor.

In closing, Law asserted he saved the state $600,000 during the first year of his administration of the tax department.

Long before the close of the hearing, friends of Commissioner Law were jubilant. They asserted the commissioner had more than offset every charge made by the governor.

HAD RESIGNED, AS IT WERE

Statement of Gilded Youth Must Have Somewhat Surprised Commander of Vessel.

A gilded London youth of somewhat effeminate tendencies found himself "stony broke." Realizing that his only chance lay in a new country, he decided to go to America, and, as he could not pay his passage money, tried to get a job on one of the boats crossing the Atlantic. Ship after ship he tried in vain, and at last began to despair of ever getting out of England—shipping people did not seem to like him. At last he tried a big liner on the verge of sailing, and found that a stoker had failed to turn up. With great joy he signed on, went aboard, was directed below by the captain, and disappeared.

Nothing was seen or heard of him for three days, but on the fourth day the skipper suddenly came upon a resplendent figure in full yachting kit, with glasses slung over one shoulder, promouncing the deck.

"What on earth are you doing here?" he demanded. "I thought I told you to go below."

The youth gazed rapturously at the frigate officer, stepped back, tapped him lightly on the shoulder, and said: "Oh, haven't you heard? I've left."

FRENCH TO READ BROWNING

At Least, Works of the English Poet Are to Be Translated into That Language.

"Robert Browning in French" does not sound an altogether promising proposition. Indeed, of all the modern poets of England one would imagine that he would be the most difficult to interpret to a foreigner. In spite of all drawbacks, however, an interesting selection of Browning's poems has been made by two translators, Paul Alfassa and Gilbert De Volaine, who have grappled by no means unsuccessfully with the acknowledged difficulties of the "enigmatic" poet. Mary Duclaux writes a foreword which is to all intents and purposes a careful study carried out in a fashion which must be undoubtedly agreeable to French readers. Mme. Duclaux is not afraid of grappling with problems either of interpretation or translation, and the little book published by the Librairie Grasset is an admirable example of that difficult art of translation of which the late Mr. Trelka de Matos was an acknowledged master. —London Daily Telegraph.

THE SWEETEST OF JOBS

THE SOLUTION

They told us that a little row of books, in length five feet or so. Would teach us all we need to know To keep us going right. But still the going seemed so rough We found five feet were not enough To solve the human problems taught That rather, left and right.

But books keep pouring from the press To ease humanity's distress. Until we feared a slight excess Of authors old and new. We looked for consolation sweet In phraseology no neat Instead of reading just five feet We read a mile or two.

And still the problems all profound In grim persistence hung around. Instructions that in books abound. Did very little good. So when we sang a little song. We faced our toil with purpose strong And happily we jogged along And did the best we could.

DREADED DENIZEN OF DEEP

Few Fortunate Enough to Escape the Deadly Clutches of Even a Small Devilfish.

Following the recently published story of a strange fish of fabulous size which was washed ashore recently at Mozambique come other stories of wonderful monsters of the deep:

Among the most feared of the denizens of the deep are the squids—commonly known as devilfishes because of their strange shape and their deadly method of attack with their powerful arms. The great staring eyes, too, have a cold demonic expression, and the horny cups of the suckers of the arms and tentacles are driven into the flesh not only by muscular force but by the pressure of the atmosphere.

They also have the faculty of changing their color like a chameleon, so as to match their surroundings and be practically invisible, as well as of squirting out an inky fluid to cover their movements. Even those with a body only a foot or so long are dangerous, and there are many cases of women and children wading in the pools at low water having been overpowered by them.

They lie in wait in the shallows, fastening one arm to a stout stalk of the great sea wrack and stiffening out the other seven, the creature can hardly be distinguished from the wrack itself. It patiently waits until a fish touches one of the arms, which at once fastens on its prey, followed by the other arms and the two tentacles, which convey it to the center of the disk, where it is seized by the beak and rapidly swallowed.

Man is attacked exactly in the same manner, as may be seen in the following case, recently recorded in the press. A diver at work off the coast of Alaska had one of his arms pinned to his side by a devilfish that was firmly anchored to a rock. While he vainly attempted to free himself his other arm was also fixed, and he would undoubtedly have lost his life had he not been at once pulled up into the diving vessel, fast bound in the overlapping arms and tentacles. Even then he was with difficulty freed from the ferocious beast, that let go its hold and fell back into the sea.

Scottish Barnyard Freak.

A cock's egg is certainly a freak of nature, yet an authentic report from Forfar, Scotland, states there is a Sussex-Leghorn cock that has taken to imitating his sisters and wives and laid some diminutive eggs. It may be nature has been a little uncertain as to the bird's sex and endowed it with more of the female than the male make-up in its anatomy. The owner was certainly puzzled at first to explain whence came the little eggs, perfect in shape and form but without yolk. So the rooster was isolated and in the privacy of its own coop it continued to produce eggs. This bird has certainly something to crow over, for it is not every cock that can lay an egg, even of bantam size.

Blow Transposed Heart?

Until his death at Sandford, N. C., a twenty-year-old farmer had lived several years with his heart on the right side of his body. The discovery was made by the undertaker when he embalmed the body. Other organs were found out of place. It is believed the heart was transposed when a bale of cotton fell on the boy two years ago.

IMPORTANT ORCHARD POINTS

Fruit Growing to Be Successful Must Follow Certain Rules and Stick to Them.

It would be easy to find hundreds of farmers in every state who are making some money out of their fruit, handling it as a side line along with crops, poultry, dairy products, or live stock. Indeed, it would be hard to discover a single neighborhood in which some one has not won a measure of success by such strategy. As a rule, we hear very little about that kind of fruit-growing; it is so much easier to write up the big and spectacular enterprises.

This kind of fruit growing, however, to achieve its best success, must follow methods different from those of the famous horticultural stars. Boiled down to the fewest words your proposition is about as follows:

1. Begin with the home orchard.
2. From this determine what varieties can be grown successfully.
3. Determine what the local market wants.
4. Plant a relatively long list of varieties, giving due regard to local adaptations.
5. Grow varieties of good quality.
6. Plant enough to make an efficient farm unit, but not to swamp the local market nor to upset the balance of the farm.

A Well-Kept Apple Orchard.

7. Give thorough tillage.
8. Use cover crops and barnyard manure, also intercrop with chemical fertilizer.
9. Spray thoroughly and intelligently, though some of the fine points of the profession may be omitted.
10. Prune cautiously, learning from experts as much as possible.
11. Grade carefully and pack honestly, but pay little attention to the pediments of close packages for the fancy city markets.
12. Use clean standard packages.
13. Finally, charge a fair price and stick to it; and don't neglect to collect the cash.—Frank A. Waugh in Farm and Fireside.

RAISE MORE FRUIT IN 1923

Owner of Good Orchard Should Take Precaution to Insure Good Results in Future.

This is not the time to stop planting and caring for fruit plants and trees. On the other hand, homes which are without fruit plants should set out a good supply next year, and the owner of a good orchard or fruit plantation should take every precaution to insure good results in the years to come. Every home should use more fruit than it does now. More can be grown in the gardens than has been the case. Do not grow more than can be well taken care of and used to advantage. A dozen plants well cared for will give better results than two dozen indifferently cared for.

SOME NEW PRACTICAL IDEAS ON SAFEGUARDING GRADE CROSSINGS

Robson's Plan Where Roadway is Parallel to Railway. On Left, Plan Where Road is at Right Angles to Railway.

M. P. Robson of Houston, Tex., has advanced an idea on the safeguarding of railroad crossings that is being hailed as a very valuable suggestion by railroad safety men and traffic men generally.

The two drawings illustrate Mr. Robson's plan. The upper drawing shows the proposed method where the roadway is parallel to the railway tracks. Take the driver in the car as pictured. If a train is coming toward him, he sees it while on the main highway. If a train is coming in the opposite direction, that is to his rear, going in the same direction with him, he can't fail to see this train when he makes the acute angle turn for the railroad crossing and is headed obliquely back in the other direction. In addition, the motorist, in order to make the acute angle turn must slow down. He will be headed toward the tracks at a very low rate of speed. He will be entirely able to stop, and, under the circumstances, it is not likely that he will have any ambition to beat the train to the crossing.

A Plan Adopted on Some of the New Roads in Central Texas.

Safety at Turn.
In case the motorist finds himself approaching the turn at too great a speed to make the acute angle turn safely the plan calls for a short runway straight ahead, where the motorist can turn around at his leisure.

The plan works in exactly the same way if the motorist is traveling in the opposite direction to the one indicated.

The second drawing illustrates the method as applied to roads that cross tracks at a right angle. The zig-zag forces a slowing down, there being one broad turn first, then an acute one. By making the acute angle turn the motorist is given a good view of the tracks in both directions before he crosses. He is forced to a very slow speed and will have his car under control.

Always a Danger Spot.
The principal thing in safeguarding grade crossings is to make the motorist understand that every crossing is a danger spot, to impress on him, as he approaches, that he is at a place where he must take precautions. Any plan which tends to make the motorist feel that the grade crossing has been made safe is worse than no plan at all.

Auto men and railway men generally who have been approached on the subject have agreed that Mr. Robson's plan is superior to any of the others suggested and they express the hope that it will speedily be given a thorough test.

While it is recognized that the plan would make railroad crossing a slow process, it is believed that motorists would not object to this if a large number of the present grade crossings are eliminated altogether. Especially it is not believed they will object to the minor delays when it is remembered that 1,000 people were killed on grade crossings in the United States last year and some 12,000 injured. This tremendous slaughter can be avoided by the adoption of an adequate safety system. Motorists generally are invited to join in the perfecting of such a system.

ACTIVE IN LEGION AFFAIRS

National Vice Commander Cooke of Georgia Gets Results With His Financial Policies.

Rehabilitation of disabled ex-service men and the establishment of sound financial policies have been the hobbies of E. Eric Cooke of Dawson, Ga., national vice commander of the American Legion.

Mr. Cooke was one of the founders of the Georgia department of the Legion and has been active in Legion affairs ever since. Serving as a member of the state executive committee, he advocated a financial policy which was largely responsible for Georgia's obtaining the largest membership increase of any department during 1922. Mr. Cooke is alternate national executive committee member from Georgia and represented his state on the committee at the Legion convention in New Orleans.

Mr. Cooke was graduated from the University of Georgia, where he was manager of the football team and was prominent in college activities. He was professor of mathematics and athletic director at the Eberly District Agricultural college and later at Gordon Military college.

During the war, the Legion officer served as a second lieutenant with the Sixteenth Machine Gun battalion in the Gerardmer sector of the Vosges mountains, a defensive sector and in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. Since discharge he has been state editor of the Macon (Ga.) News and managing editor of the Athens Banner. He is now a farmer and real estate man.

HONORS FOR TWO AMERICANS

Louisiana Men Are Named as Honorary Members of the Belgian Veterans' Legion.

The signal honor of being made honorary member of the Belgian Veterans' Legion came to Clarence J. Bourg, Louisiana American Legion national executive committee member, and Mayor Robert Mouton of Lafayette, La., during the International Veterans' association convention in New Orleans. There are only five honorary members of the Belgian ex-service men's organization.

The Louisiana men acted as hosts to the Belgian delegation at the New Orleans gathering. Presentation was formally made by M. Joseph Janna, assistant minister of labor for Belgium, a vice president of the association and commander of the Belgian Legion. The diploma and badge will be presented to the Americans by King Albert at the next association gathering at Brussels in 1923.

WELL RECEIVED IN HAVANA

American Legion Men Report Marked Hospitality While on Recent Visit to Cuba.

Tales of excellent hospitality from American Legion members in Havana have been brought to this country by Legionnaires who journeyed to Cuba following the recent national convention in New Orleans.

The program held by the Havana buddies included a visit to Legion headquarters, a trip to the jail, a game at the Havana-Madrid Fronton, which provided front boxes for the visitors and visits to Morro castle, Capitanes fortress and other interesting points. Hotels and restaurants welcomed the Legionnaires with elaborate decorations and special rates in addition to providing information booths and other conveniences.

Havana has one of the largest foreign posts of the Legion. It is composed of veterans from nearly every branch of the service. The reception arrangements were conducted by Capt. George T. Street, post commander, and John Blacka.

Hear Radio Address.

When a representative of the United States Veterans' bureau broadcast a radio talk on the "Possibilities of a Rehabilitated Ex-Service Man" at Atlanta, under the direction of Joe Sparks, the new chairman of the American Legion's national rehabilitation committee, his remarks were listened to with interest by 200 veterans in a training school at Cookeville, Tenn., 800 miles away.

TO KEEP CAR RUNNING
WELL DURING WINTER.

Good, Clean Oil Is of Most Vital Importance.

Just a Few Changes From Summer Running Are Necessary and Six Helpful Suggestions Are Offered to Owners of Automobiles.

A motorist should have no more trouble with his car in winter than he does in summer, if he takes the right precautions. Cold weather operation requires just a few changes from summer running, and the following six helpful suggestions are made to those operating motor cars in cold weather.

1. Use a good, clean oil with a low cold test. It will flow at the first turn over.
2. A little alcohol in your radiator will prevent a frozen radiator, cause less inconvenience and preclude cracked cylinder blocks.
3. A radiator cover will keep your engine and radiator warm. It also makes far easier starting and saves your storage battery.
4. Drain your crank case more frequently in winter than in summer. Every 500 miles is a good plan.
5. Easy starting even in coldest weather, will result from the use of volatile gasoline, because of its low boiling point.
6. There are more than fifty parts on your car that need lubrication. See that they get it this winter.

PUTTING WATER IN RADIATOR

Plan Outlined Whereby It Can Be Done Without Overflow on Floor of the Garage.

Pouring too much water in the radiator has become such a habit that most car owners seem to consider it a sport. They stop pouring in water when the streams of rust-colored fluid start trickling down the shell and core. Then they hunt for a dry rag and spend ten minutes cleaning up.

By inserting one end of a four-inch piece of copper tubing—of same diameter as overflow pipe—into a suitable hole in the center of a large cork, and by then inserting the cork in the spout of the watering can, water can be poured in without the possibility of overflowing on the outside. As the water cannot flow in any faster than it can flow out the overflow pipe, the owner can be as careless or as hasty about the job as he pleases. Even in the dark he would know when to stop simply by the sound of the water dripping to the garage floor from the overflow pipe. The contraption can be carried in a side pocket and used in the watering can of any garage.

The Correct Mixture.

The mixture in the carburetor is correct if the engine runs without choking, popping or missing in the lowest possible speed or the highest possible speed or at any speed between these two extremes. The color of the exhaust flame, if exhaust manifold were removed or petcocks in cylinder head opened, should be a faint blue or purple.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Check timing of motor.

Look over water cooling system and determine that there are no leaks.

Note operation of clutch and whether there is excessive play in clutch pedal.

To get the longest mileage out of tires, see that they are the proper tires for the rims and see that they fit snugly.

Glycerine applied to the windshield with a piece of cotton or waste, will help keep the glass clean when driving in rain.

Many motorists carry a flashlight in their cars, and this little piece of equipment is extremely valuable for emergency use.

The greatest care must be taken in straightening out dents in the fenders, if the parts are not to assume a battered appearance.

An automobile traveling 25 miles an hour on a 50-mile run will consume less gasoline than if it were traveling 45 miles an hour.

Drain out all old oil in the motor and replace with clean oil every 500 miles, always make sure gauge registers indicate proper level and that pressure gauge indicates properly.

Use FREEMAN advertising regularly and conservatively and results will surely follow.

ST. COLMAN'S CHURCH ON FIRE

Blaze Discovered in Sanctuary About 9:50 O'Clock Thursday Evening Caused $1,500 Damages, Which Is Covered by Insurance—Fire of Unknown Origin.

Fire of unknown origin in the sanctuary of St. Colman's Church at East Kingston at 9:50 o'clock Thursday evening caused a damage of $1,500 which is covered by insurance. Services had been held at the church that evening but when the building was closed for the night everything was apparently all right.

The fire was discovered by James Volker, a young man residing near the church, who promptly gave an alarm. At the rectory is an electrically driven pump to which was attached a garden hose and water was thrown on the flames.

The work of fighting the fire was directed by the Rev. Thomas Larkin, who had been recently appointed to that parish, and with the assistance of a number of neighbors the fire was soon under control.

While the interior of the church is smoke-damaged services will be held as usual.

Stains Removed And Wash Made Snowy-White

Housewives Delighted With Washday Help

At last a scientific whitener has been discovered. Just a little in the ordinary washing water dissolves the most obstinate stains and turns lousy and white garments out as snowy and immaculate as when new. So efficient is this new preparation that it is now used by textile manufacturers to give their linen and cotton products the dazzling white sheen you so admire in new things before they are washed.

Actually, stains of every kind you can think of disappear as though they never were when a little NACO is added to the tub water. Don't despair when the baby spits up and everything over the prettiest white dress in its outfit. Remain calm and serene when the school-boy comes home with glaring inkstains on his best white shirt. Perspiration marks, blood stains disappear in a jiffy at the touch of friendly NACO. Yet it is as harmless as pure soap and actually lengthens the life of garments by eliminating the necessity of hard rubbing. Besides it deodorizes and disinfects—makes any white cloth or apparel microscopically clean and pure. You will appreciate its efficiency all the more when sickness adds to washday labor.

Get NACO this week and watch the wonderful improvement on Monday in the appearance of your table linen and white linen and cotton garments. Only 15c a bottle at your grocer's.

HANDICRAFT FOR GIRLS

By DOROTHY PERKINS

(Copyright by A. Neely Hall.)

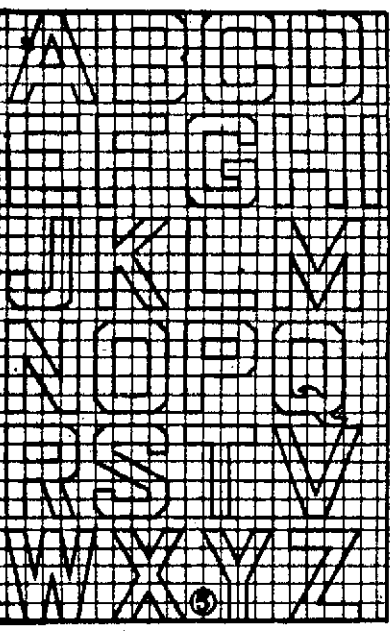

PENNANTS, ARM BANDS, AND A MEGAPHONE.

You can make the pennants easily, and the material, light-weight flannel, will be inexpensive, because only a small piece will be required. There are no fixed proportions for pennants. I have several that measure 24 inches long and 9 inches wide, one of this same width, but 30 inches long, and several little ones 14 inches long and 6 inches wide. Suit yourself as to the dimensions, and make either a single point (Fig. 1) or two points (Fig. 2), and use one, two, or three colors, as you choose. It is important to lay out the measurements carefully, so as to get opposite edges symmetrical and you will find it easiest to prepare a paper pattern, then mark around its edges upon the cloth.

Fig. 3 shows an alphabet of the right proportions for the letters of your pennants. Make the letters U and V alike. These are marked off into squares to make it easy to enlarge them. Suppose that you want letters four times as high as these letters. First mark off a series of squares four times the height of the squares upon the pattern; then locate points upon the large squares corresponding to the corners and intersecting points of the letters on the pattern, and join the points with straight lines, to make the enlarged letters. Make paper patterns of the letters, cut them out, and mark around them on the flannel.

Bind the wide end of the pennant with a strip of flannel, and fasten two pairs of tapes to this re-enforced edge, as shown in the illustrations. If the pennant is to be made of two or more colors, place the edges of the strips together, and overcast them.

Besides the pennants, an arm band bearing the initial of your school or class should be worn at games. This should be prepared of the shape shown in Fig. 4, out of flannel, with the initial cut out of flannel and glued upon it. Sew a tape to each end, by which to strap the band about your arm. An outdoor game cannot be cheered with the proper enthusiasm without a megaphone, and one of these sound magnifiers can be made of heavy wrapping paper (Fig. 6). You can cut the paper to the shape shown in the pattern of Fig. 7, the ends of which are curved just right, or you can roll up the paper and trim off the ends afterwards. Glue together the edges of the paper, and re-enforce both ends by gluing paper over them. A leather strap stitched to the side will make a handle.

HOW

EARTH'S MOTION MAY BE DEMONSTRATED IN HOME.—With a bowl of water and some powdered resin one may observe the earth's motion. Select a room that is fairly free from vibration. Then obtain a good-sized bowl or tub a foot or more in diameter and rather deep, and nearly fill it with water. Place this on the floor of the room in such a position that it need not be disturbed for some hours. Get some finely-powdered resin and sprinkle a coating of this on the water. Any fine substance that would float and not be dissolved for some hours would do as well.

Next secure a little coal dust and sprinkle some on the top of the resin in a straight line from the center to the circumference. Carry this line up over the rim of the bowl, and make it broad enough to be clear. See—say about an inch in width. The bowl may now be left for several hours, at the end of which time it will be noticed that an interesting thing has happened. It will be seen, writes S. Leonard Bastin in the Scientific American, that the line of the surface of the water has changed its position and that it no longer meets that which runs up over the rim of the bowl. As a matter of fact the black line on the surface of the water has swept around from east to west.

What has happened is this: The water in the bowl has stood still throughout the time which it has been left, while the vessel itself has been carried around by the motion of the earth from west to east. Another way of putting it is that the earth has swung around through a considerable arc from west to east, leaving the water quite stationary.

BUTTS OF ALLEGED "WITS"

Why Red-Headed People Are Generally Afflicted With Notoriously Short Tempers.

Commenting on a discussion at the British association of "Why are red-haired people short-tempered," William Rufus writes in a London weekly: Red-haired men are goaded into short-temperedness between the ages of six and sixteen. At that age the character is very plastic, and bad temper becomes part of the developed character which remains until the red hair turns white and falls out. But why blame the children? Music hall (alleged) comedians plagued my life out at twenty-five with their offensive "Ginger, you're hairy!" "Captain Gingham," and similar inanities which came as manna to urchins in the street. I am positive that my earliest personal recollections are of listening in a kind of uncomprehending amazement to a crowd of other children shouting, "Tah! Carrots!" "Sometimes the inventive was varied to "Hi, Rusty!" "Who stayed out all night in the rain?" My brothers, in our bellicose moments of marble strife and postage-stamp warfare, always took my last trench with "Ginger!" My schoolmaster could always make the whole class roar with laughter by smilingly saying, "What! In trouble again, Master Redpoll? Hold out your hand!"

Why Villa Is Contented.
Francisco Villa is to have more land added to his already large ranch, or collection of ranches. He is to have a slice off the San Isidro ranch in Chihuahua and another slice off Earl Salvador ranch in Durango. These are to be divided up among the men who have remained with Villa since his old fighting days. These he has trained to be as good farmers as they were fighters; and the proposal now is to give each man who has shown intelligence and ability to take care of himself a small farm of his own. All these farms will be under the control of Villa, just as the land previously conceded to him is directly under his management, although he has more than 500 men on Canutillo ranch. The proposed addition to Villa's ranch contains several thousand acres.—Mexico Correspondence Chicago Tribune.

How Desert Conditions Arise.
Desert conditions arise in any region in which the rainfall is markedly less than the amount of water that evaporates from the surface. As the amount of evaporation naturally increases from the polar regions toward the tropics and is affected by winds and elevation, it follows that no arbitrary amount of rainfall may be designated as an invariable cause or accompaniment of arid or desert conditions.

Thus in certain portions of the tropics a rainfall less than 70 inches results in aridity, while some of the most fertile agricultural districts in the north and south temperate zones receive scarcely one-third this amount.—New York Herald.

How Sea Changes Color.
An even sky of rich blue will be reflected in the water below. A gray sky means grayish water. Rocks, sands, and seaweed also play their parts. When the sea laps yellow sands beneath a blue sky, we get varying shades of green in the water, for green is formed with yellow and blue. It's the same when the water flows over many rocks and much seaweed. Similar answers will be found for other hues.

Fish at Play.
Fish play games just like other creatures. It is common to see a fish in an aquarium pick up a small stone and swim about with it in its mouth. It will drop it and pick it up again. Inhabitants of the sea do the same with shells.

RASPBERRIES HAVE ENEMIES

Old Wood Harbors Insects and Fungous Diseases and Should Be Cut Out After Harvest.

Red raspberries are produced on the wood which grows during the previous year. Right after harvest the old canes should be pruned out to give the new wood a chance to develop to better advantage. The old wood harbors insect pests and fungous diseases and should be burned to destroy them. Raspberry patches are sometimes ruined because cane blight, anthracnose or cane borers obtain a start. It pays to control these troubles as much as possible by clean culture and the destruction of diseased and pest-ridden canes.

Cane blight causes the fruiting canes to wilt and die. It often occurs just before harvest time when there are good prospects for a crop. Such canes must be cut off close to the ground and burned. The control of this disease is not fully understood and it makes extensive red raspberry growing rather risky.

Anthracnose causes grayish spots with purple margins near the base of canes. It is a common trouble. Three applications of lime-sulphur have proved en to be of some value in controlling anthracnose. A mixture of two and a half gallons of lime-sulphur to 50 gallons of water is used when the leaves start. A mixture of one and a quarter gallons to 50 can be applied when the shoots are five or six inches high. The same is used again before blossoming time.

About June the female cane borer may puncture raspberry canes near the tips and lay eggs in the incisions. The little worms that hatch burrow down into the pith and cause the canes to die. When the infested canes are seen to wilt the tips containing the worms should be clipped off and burned. The prompt burning of the old canes after the fruiting season is also of value in destroying this pest. There are several other insects and fungous diseases which slightly injure red raspberries, but the above are the only ones that have caused us losses. It seems as if considerable more scientific investigation of raspberry insects and diseases will be necessary before the production of berries on a large scale will be attempted by the average farmer.

LABELS WILL INJURE TREES

Whether of Copper or Iron It Is Dangerous Thing to Let Remain, Particularly on Peach.

No matter whether the label is of copper or iron it is a dangerous thing to leave on a tree when you plant it, particularly when left on a peach tree, which is a very fast grower. If the wire is left on the tree at planting it is pretty sure to cut through the bark as the tree expands, and thus seriously injures or destroys the tree. If you will twist the label wire around a branch of the tree instead of around the body your trees will escape injury. Labels are not the best device for indicating varieties. The best plan is to have a book of records. Beginning at a certain point, number the trees 1, 2, 3, 4, and so on.

SETTING OUT ORCHARD TREES

Those Which Cannot Be Planted in Proper Places on Arrival Should Be Heeled In.

Trees received from the nursery which cannot be planted in their places in the new orchard at once should be heeled in upon arrival. Trees that are neglected when out of the ground are losing just so much vitality and if subjected to action of wind or sun may soon dry out and die. Heeling in is the safe way to handle them and will give you time to get ready to plant if you have been caught unawares by their arrival.

Clean Up in Orchard.
Remove all grass and trash from around fruit and ornamental trees. It is easier to do this now than to bridge graft injuries made by mice and rabbits during the winter.

Cut Out Dead Canes.
See that all dead canes are cut out of the raspberry patch and burned. This disturbs many insect homes.

Remove Dead Trees.
Remove all dead trees from the orchard and burn them.

Physical Makeup Important.
The physical makeup of the individual plays an important part in the development of the personality, and in many instances determines the success or failure of a normal biological life.—Dr. Irving J. Sanders.

FRUITS FROZEN IN TRANSIT

Enormous Losses Caused Annually by Products Freezing While in Hands of Railroads.

Enormous losses are caused annually because large quantities of fruits and vegetables are frozen in transit. Last winter shippers of apples in three states—Oregon, Washington, and Idaho—filed claims against railroads amounting to over $3,000,000 to cover losses from freezing. To assist in reducing such losses, the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture, has distributed as widely as possible information relative to the proper methods of loading and heating both refrigerator and ordinary box cars. Recently, as a result of investigations, the bureau has practically completed the design for heating equipment for use in connection with the United States standard refrigerator car, the specifications for which were drawn up in this bureau. Experiments have shown that a refrigerator car, equipped with this heating system, will protect fruits and vegetables from freezing, even at a temperature of 40 degrees below zero. Service tests, to adapt this heating system to practical every-day conditions, will be carried on this winter.

Aim for Productiveness.
Larger crops as well as better prices are needed. Our yields are not what they should be nor what we could help make them.

Hog Cholera.
The most serious obstacle to the swine industry is hog cholera.

Digging Holes for Trees.
In digging the holes for the trees in the orchard, dig them large enough to admit the roots of the trees easily without breaking or bending. The hole should be large enough so that the roots can be spread out in their natural position.

Berries Worth Growing.
Autumn-bearing strawberries have done well this year only where they have had plenty of moisture. Nevertheless they are worth growing in the home garden.

Replacing Unsanitary Floors.
Unsanitary and short-lived plank floors in dairy barns are being replaced by clean, permanent ones of concrete.

Helps Prevent Disease.
Good ventilation of live stock barns, by installing outlet flues, will go a long way toward preventing diseases.

Make Plans for Garden.
Write down your garden plans for next summer, before you forget what you learned this year.

HANDY SALT BOX FOR STOCK

Among Advantages of Receptacle Shown in Illustration Is That It Can Be Nailed to Post.

One of the handiest salt boxes which I have seen is made on the order of the one illustrated. Two or three advantages are at once noticed. This box is nailed or bolted to a post near the barn entrance and provided with a lid which projects over the front. The front of the box is about three inches lower than the back. It doesn't take the stock long to learn that it is but necessary to raise the lid with their noses and partake to their heart's content. The moment they are through the lid falls back in place, thus keeping the contents clean and protected from rain, which often causes as much salt as several cows.

CATCH SHEEP IN RIGHT WAY

Much Suffering Could Be Prevented by Little More Intelligent and Careful Handling.

Much of the suffering withstood by sheep might be avoided by a little more careful and intelligent handling. Many an ignorant stockowner, catches a sheep by the wool, at any place he can get hold of handiest. They do not realize that the skin is very lightly attached to the flesh and that by holding the sheep in this careless manner, the skin is torn loose from the flesh thus bruising the innocent sheep. It is claimed by some authorities that it takes the sheep two months to recover from the bruise thus incurred. The proper way to catch a sheep is by the flank, and thus no injury is inflicted on the sheep. Even a very large strong sheep will soon give up and stand still when caught in this way.

SPROUTING OATS FOR FOWLS

Essential Where Roots or Other Green Feeds Are Not Available for Poultry.

Sprouted oats is rather a necessity than a luxury for poultry in winter, particularly if roots or other green feeds are not available. Only the best grade of oats, plump and heavy, should be used. They should be handled in such a manner as to reach maximum growth quickly. Six quarts of oats are placed in a ten-quart galvanized tin pail which is filled with water of a temperature not over 100 degrees Fahrenheit, to which has been added ten drops of formalin to prevent mold.

The oats are allowed to soak in this pail for 48 hours during which they will have absorbed all the water which is maintained at not less than 60 degrees, and the oats are thoroughly sprinkled with water twice a day. In from seven to ten days, according to the temperature of the room, the sprouts should be from three to six inches in height, which is shown right for feeding. By this time the nutrients of the seed will have become exhausted and the sprouts will be of little value if not fed quickly. The oats will form a mass nearly four times the weight of the original seed. It should be fed in the tray, as it grows, at the rate of one square inch per bird per day. Once a day is enough to feed it. If managed carefully a new tray can be ready every day. A little experience will show how this can be done as it is purely a matter of measurement, a certain quantity being prepared daily. For small flocks less than six quarts could be prepared at a time. Over-feeding tends to cause diarrhoea. Of course, the sprouts must not be allowed to freeze and it is too valuable to be wasted. Anyone handy with tools can make a rack in the farm workshop.

FINISH POULTRY FOR MARKET

Plump, Well Fattened Fowl Will Bring More Money and Sell Far More Readily.

No up-to-date farmer would think of marketing his cattle or hogs in a poor or unfinished condition, because to do so would mean a loss of money; but on many farms poultry is seldom properly finished before marketing. A plump well-finished bird will sell more readily and bring a few cents more per pound, besides being worth more on account of the increase in weight, than a poor, scrawny fowl. Moreover, producing finished poultry is a quick business and profits are soon realized.

PICKING OUT BEST PULLETS

Fowl Should Possess Carriage and Appearance of Vigor for Production of Eggs.

A good laying pullet will have the carriage and appearance of vigor that go with egg production. The pullets should be well grown, with fairly long back, well-rounded breast, with good depth of body from the middle of the back to the center of the keel bone. The keel should be long and carried well forward, and at the same time should extend well backward. The skin should be soft and pliable over the keel and around the abdomen.

PROPER CARE OF DROPPINGS

Mistaken Idea to Think They Will Freeze as Soon as Accumulated in Pile.

It is very natural to think that the cold weather will freeze the droppings as fast as they accumulate, and that, if they do pile up under the roosts, it will make little difference. This is wrong, for the droppings never stay frozen very long at a time. A warm night in winter is very trying on the fowls, when the droppings have been permitted to accumulate too long.

When Twenty-Five and Twenty

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD

(© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

October the tenth—that's my red-letter day. That is the day in my life that stands out prominently above all other days. My marriage day? Not exactly. It's the day I knew Wenda loved me, the day we held each other in our arms for the first time and swore nothing in life should part us.

Romantic fools? Oh, I suppose so. We were twenty-five and twenty then, and neither had been tempered in the flame of life. But we did know, from observation, that love doesn't last.

We considered the cases of all the married people we knew, and there wasn't one couple as happy as we thought married folks ought to be.

And so Wenda and I took a vow under Farmer Bean's great oak tree. I smile when I recall it.

So long as we lived, no matter what happened to us, we'd meet once a year, every October the tenth, under Farmer Bean's oak tree, and renew our vows, and tell each other how the year had treated us.

Good Lord, what fools we were! That was thirty years ago. I'm fifty-five now, and Wenda's fifty, and life has been so plump with either of us.

Some of these meetings have been comparatively placid. The year had done nothing much to us. Some have been stormy. Wenda and I both married in the same year, and it was the October tenth after that was the hardest.

"Did she suspect that you were coming to meet your sweetheart?" asked Wenda.

"Did he suspect?" I countered. "We looked at each other and burst into laughing."

"How do you like being married, Harry?" Wenda asked. "Not all roses, a lot."

"Aren't you happy?" I asked. We had agreed never to use endearments; it was just because we had vowed to meet, we wanted to follow up each other's lives.

"He's got a temper," Wenda sighed. "I'm very fond of her," I said, "but—Oh, Wenda, that first evening—that evening when we knew that we loved each other!"

We kissed each other and parted.

A quick thought came to her. Twice before little Dick had started to find his daddy. Sudden panic seized her as she noticed black thunder clouds gathering. Hastily she awoke Beth and together they made a more careful search. Beth telephoned to the neighboring cottages, but nothing had been seen of the runaway. Meanwhile the thunder rumbled and the storm drew closer.

Men from all around gathered and the little party began their search. Doris, wrapped in a raincoat like the men, went with them, as nothing could persuade her to remain at home. Her face was deathly white and her eyes were like coals, but with the others she pushed onward. The storm broke with torrents of rain, vivid lightning and crashes of thunder. Still the search continued. Doris trembled, but clung close to Beth and could not be forced to turn back. It was late when the storm let up and the moon broke through the black clouds. Slowly Doris became her own calm self, but the fear and pain in her heart were almost unbearable.

Midnight passed and they had almost decided to give up the search when Doris heard a slight noise and some way managed to slip away from the others unnoticed. Her heart gave a leap as she spied, a short distance ahead of her, a man half standing, holding a little figure in his arms. They were in the shadow of a large tree and the man's back was towards her, so that she could not see his face. As she approached them she bent over the little face.

"Oh, Dickie," she faltered. "Oh, darling! Is he hurt?" She asked this of the man, who had now risen to his feet.

Before he could speak, Dickie threw out his little arms. "Mother," the little voice was soft and unsteady; "mother, I've found my daddy." The baby eyes closed, and he snuggled closer to the man's breast.

"My Doris, could you ever forgive me?" The man put out his arms and drew her to him.

"Oh, Jack, you don't know how I've wanted you!"

"Not any more than I've wanted you, my little girl," he whispered, as he kissed her quivering lips.

It was nearly morning when, at last, Dickie lay in his little bed, while the doctor said one word, "pneumonia," and shook his head doubtfully.

It was during these hours, while Dickie slept, that Jack Royce found a minute to explain. Finding life at home a torture without his wife and child, he had hired a cottage and, with a friend, had gone there for their vacation without the least knowledge of his wife's whereabouts. Upon the preceding afternoon, while walking alone, he had taken shelter from the storm in a cave. A few minutes before Doris found him holding the boy, he had heard a cry, and going out, had found Dickie in a wet, rumpled little bundle.

All of that night, the one following Dickie's rescue, Doris and Jack knelt side by side at the little white crib. It seemed to the two breaking hearts that all that they held most dear, most sacred, seemed slowly slipping away with each tiny breath that came from the white, still body. It was only occasionally that Dickie opened his big

"Vague alarm in her eyes. 'Why?' 'Because you're going to run away with me.'"

"Harry! What do you mean?" "Here we are, two middle-aged persons—and that only by courtesy. Your children and mine have both grown up and left us. Two old persons, with a longing to be happy together. Why shouldn't we just go off somewhere for—well, for a long time. To Europe or—well, Florida. Somewhere where we can have a honeymoon together and forget the cares of life. Will you meet me tomorrow night at ten at the Union station?"

"Harry, you—do you mean that?" "Every word of it, darling."

She put her arms round my neck. "Then, Harry, I'll come."

She met me at ten o'clock, carrying only a suitcase. I was waiting for her. I took her to Florida, then we spent three months in Cuba and among the islands. That was our real honeymoon. At last we came back.

Scandal? Not a bit of it. You see, that was the game we had devised to keep ourselves young and in love. Wenda and I have been married thirty years next October the tenth.

Not a Pot-Boiler.

Alfred Noyes, the Englishman who holds the chair of literature at Princeton, makes poetry pay, but William Butler Yeats, a real poet, says that his writings bring him only $150 a year.

A journalist condoled with Mr. Yeats one day on his small income, but the bard smiled and said: "The fires of genius never make the pot boil."

The Sacrifice They Made

By MARION A. CHILSON

(© 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It was dusk when Doris Royce dropped her book into her lap and gazed steadily across the water. Her thoughts went back to the day when she, with little Dick, had left home in bitter anger and had taken refuge here, in answer to Cousin Beth's invitation to spend a few weeks with her at her cottage on Lake Fairview. The quarrel had been over a trifling matter, but of the whole episode one utterance stood out clearly, the answer her husband had given to her hysterical statement that he no longer loved her.

"Love, real love, is gained only by sacrifice," were the words that repeated themselves over and over in the girl's troubled brain and puzzled her strangely.

Another thing troubled Doris. Little Dick had always been his father's constant companion, and in his estimation no one else was quite so great as daddy. The two idolized each other, and now that they were separated the little fellow begged constantly for his father. It hurt Doris to refuse him, since he was not very well and never had been during his short life of four years. Often something within her whispered for the boy's sake, if none other, to forgive and forget. But in the end her pride always conquered.

Although the days at Fairview were full of young people, gayety and fun, they passed slowly for Doris. Something was lacking, and she, knowing where this something was and that her happiness depended upon it, could not reach out and grasp it, although it lay just beyond her reach.

Two weeks passed when, one afternoon, Doris, with the same heavy heart, put little Dick to sleep in his crib and then lay down herself. She awoke about two hours later and arose quickly, as she had slept longer than she had intended. Glancing toward the crib, she was astonished to see that it was empty. Rushing downstairs, she gave a hurried survey of the rooms. Her face went white as she noticed that the screen door was unfastened. Beth had forgotten it before going to her rooms.

A quick thought came to her. Twice before little Dick had started to find his daddy. Sudden panic seized her as she noticed black thunder clouds gathering. Hastily she awoke Beth and together they made a more careful search. Beth telephoned to the neighboring cottages, but nothing had been seen of the runaway. Meanwhile the thunder rumbled and the storm drew closer.

Men from all around gathered and the little party began their search. Doris, wrapped in a raincoat like the men, went with them, as nothing could persuade her to remain at home. Her face was deathly white and her eyes were like coals, but with the others she pushed onward. The storm broke with torrents of rain, vivid lightning and crashes of thunder. Still the search continued. Doris trembled, but clung close to Beth and could not be forced to turn back. It was late when the storm let up and the moon broke through the black clouds. Slowly Doris became her own calm self, but the fear and pain in her heart were almost unbearable.

Midnight passed and they had almost decided to give up the search when Doris heard a slight noise and some way managed to slip away from the others unnoticed. Her heart gave a leap as she spied, a short distance ahead of her, a man half standing, holding a little figure in his arms. They were in the shadow of a large tree and the man's back was towards her, so that she could not see his face. As she approached them she bent over the little face.

"Oh, Dickie," she faltered. "Oh, darling! Is he hurt?" She asked this of the man, who had now risen to his feet.

Before he could speak, Dickie threw out his little arms. "Mother," the little voice was soft and unsteady; "mother, I've found my daddy." The baby eyes closed, and he snuggled closer to the man's breast.

"My Doris, could you ever forgive me?" The man put out his arms and drew her to him.

"Oh, Jack, you don't know how I've wanted you!"

"Not any more than I've wanted you, my little girl," he whispered, as he kissed her quivering lips.

It was nearly morning when, at last, Dickie lay in his little bed, while the doctor said one word, "pneumonia," and shook his head doubtfully.

It was during these hours, while Dickie slept, that Jack Royce found a minute to explain. Finding life at home a torture without his wife and child, he had hired a cottage and, with a friend, had gone there for their vacation without the least knowledge of his wife's whereabouts. Upon the preceding afternoon, while walking alone, he had taken shelter from the storm in a cave. A few minutes before Doris found him holding the boy, he had heard a cry, and going out, had found Dickie in a wet, rumpled little bundle.

It seemed to the two breaking hearts that all that they held most dear, most sacred, seemed slowly slipping away with each tiny breath that came from the white, still body. It was only occasionally that Dickie opened his big blue eyes, but seeing his father and mother, he closed them happily. Only once did he venture to speak, and then his voice was so weak that it frightened the listeners.

"Daddy, you will always stay with mother and me, won't you?"

"Yes, darling, I'll never go away again," Jack slipped his arm under the little fellow while Doris smoothed a little hand and smothered back a sob.

CHIEF J. A. WOOD
TALKED THURSDAY

Police Head Addressed Monthly Meeting of the Schoolmasters' Club at Advance Restaurant, Following Banquet.

Chief of Police J. Allan Wood delivered the address at the monthly session of the Schoolmasters' Club at the Advance Restaurant, opposite the court house on Wall street, Thursday evening. The chief's address followed a banquet. The speaker was introduced by Principal R. H. Van Valkenburgh of School No. 4. The club is composed of the men teachers and principals of the schools of Kingston.

Among other things Chief Wood said:

And while we are discussing methods of catching criminals it might be well to add that "Crime Prevention" is a topic of the day and I am convinced that the educators have a greater duty to perform than was ever realized before. An old axiom is "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" and while this expression is often used it is a good one. To prevent crime we must attack it at its source. We should not permit anything to exist which would corrupt the morals of the young. Young people should be kept busy. The child of today is the citizen of tomorrow. Leisure should be controlled. The control of leisure should be given first consideration for it is during these hours that the opportunity is found for questionable conduct. The peace, comfort and happiness of our citizens of tomorrow depend largely on the education of the young toward good citizenship.

The founders of our government said "Eternal vigilance is the price of Liberty." I believe it is also the price of good citizenship. I have no doubt but that you gentlemen are teaching good citizenship daily and I desire to acknowledge the cooperation the police are receiving from the school. But with the changing conditions in this country it is necessary to exercise vigilance to the fullest extent in order that we do not take a step backward. We all should continue to encourage obedience to law. We should encourage loyal standards among the young, we should encourage them to work industriously and live thriftily, courageously and reverently. Reverence includes respect for religion, respect for law, respect for the aged, respect for women and respect for children. It also includes respect for superiors. Independent action should also be taught because it develops a consciousness of power and furnishes the resourcefulness which enables them, when they become older, to sustain themselves in thought and action and also makes for sound motives. It develops wholesome pride in the achievements and good character of the home, occupation, community and country.

FATTY'S ESCAPE FROM CANNIBALS

Savages Preparing to Pot Roast a Galluper When Captain Roodboy Rescues Him—Looks Like Exciting Times in Africa.

"Wake up in Africa boys," shouted Blink Biven as he aroused the other members of the round-the-world Gallupers, who were still sleeping the sleep of the tired after their labors in digging a trench to float the good ship Marie Ellen, which had landed them safely on the coast of the Dark Continent.

Roodboy, Zink Biven, Raiser Turk and Fatty Clink, the other members of the party, were soon roused by the shouts of Blink, and the duties of the day were started. Acting on the suggestion of Captain Roodboy, leader of the expedition, the boys had decided to spend several days in camp until they got acclimated.

The day passed swiftly and pleasantly with plenty of work to do but after the evening meal Fatty Clink decided to wander off by himself and while strolling through the forest near the shore he found himself suddenly seized. Before he could yell out a dirty hand was clapped over his mouth and he felt himself lifted and borne swiftly through the forest.

At first Fatty was inclined to believe that the other Gallupers were playing a trick, but as time passed and the ones who had captured him uttered not a sound he began to realize the seriousness of his situation. Suddenly he found himself set down in the midst of a native village and soon a crowd had gathered around him. They poked admiring fingers into his side and then stood off and licked their lips reflectively.

It was not until later that Fatty found to his horror he had been captured by cannibals and that he was destined to grace the feast the next day. He was bound and tumbled in a heap into an empty hut in the village while several huge cannibals armed with spears stood guard outside. What Fatty's feelings were had best be left to the imagination.

In the meantime when Fatty still continued absent the camp of the Gallupers was thrown into wild alarm and the boys among themselves set out to find the missing boy. It was Captain Roodboy, who through accident struck the right trail and following it cautiously found himself on the outskirts of the native village.

Daybreak came as Roodboy crouched in the bushes nearby and watched for an opportunity to rescue Fatty, but it looked like a forlorn hope. As night drew on apiece the drums of the villagers began to beat and the inhabitants to gather in the square where hung a huge fire. Suddenly Roodboy gasped as he saw several huge savages lead Fatty from the hut toward the fire and there prepare to slit his throat.

Was Fatty's life to be offered up as a feast for those black devils?

Ten thousand times no. Captain Ralph Roodboy, alone and unassisted, determined to rescue his comrade from a horrid fate. Advancing toward the assemblage Roodboy felt his rage increase by leaps and bounds and he fairly sparkled with energy and determination. As he advanced closer his face grew set and stern and fire flashed from his eyes.

He had not been seen as yet by the savages who were intent on gazing at Fatty, and suddenly, varvelous as it may seem, the burning flashes emitted from Roodboy's eyes set fire to the nearest hut and in less time than it takes to tell the whole village was a roaring mass of flames.

In the confusion Roodboy rushed in and knocking down the astonished savages grasped Fatty in his arms and carried him to safety.

It was a happy reunion of Gallupers that gathered around the camp fire that night, and little they gave heed to the dangers that the future held in store for them.

WALKER VALLEY.

Walker Valley, Jan. 18.—There was no church service or Sunday school on account of the storm.

Mrs. J. Weiss and children have gone to the city.

The Ladies' Auxiliary held a card party on Thursday night at the fire house. A jolly crowd attended and all had a good time. After the games, refreshments were served and dancing was indulged in. Prizes were won by Mr. Rose, Henry Evans and Miss Beckridge.

Our road commissioner was in town several times last week.

Miss Anna Barkley is visiting in Brooklyn.

The school children were made very happy three times during and after the holidays. First by Miss Graff presenting each with candy, then Miss Eloise Kirby each with a nice present and last but not least by their school teacher, Miss Anna Strang, presenting them each with several useful presents.

Frank Beal, who left for New York Saturday, probably for the rest of this winter, was given a farewell party on Friday night. A bounteous feast was served in the fire house. The tables were decorated with crepe paper and candles with pretty colored shades. There were 24 guests. A pleasant evening was spent and all wished Frank good luck when they parted.

Mrs. Strong, who has been visiting Mrs. Eva Cole, returned home Monday.

AMERICA IN FILMS.

A fact of recent history, more illuminating than welcome, is recalled by certain remarks of Will H. Hays in the current Review of Reviews on the "earnest purpose" and "spirit of service" animating the movie industry under his direction. Members of his organization of producers and distributors, writes Mr. Hays, "have taken definite steps to make sure that every film which goes abroad will correctly portray the purposes, the ideals, the accomplishments, the opportunities and the life of America. We are going to sell America to the world with motion pictures." The unpleasant fact which this calls to mind is that last year the French papers followed the news of the Arbuckle case with a heavy-headed magazine feature entitled "The Land of Fatty; or, The Orgies of Los Angeles," whereupon the French public "rushed" to see the Arbuckle films, thus learning a good deal about the "life" of America not of a character to flatter our pride.

Possibly Mr. Hays was thinking of this when he suppressed "Fatty." The precise nature of his mental processes when he gave him the Christmas present of reinstatement is not known, but he seems to have definitely decided that again to "sell America to the world" with "Fatty" included would be perfectly all right. However that may be, many of us will be slow to agree that either the "Fatty" films or more than a few others being "sold" to the world "correctly portray" the "life" of America, let alone its "purposes, ideals, accomplishments and opportunities."

THE INDIAN'S PEYOTE.

At a time when so many reformers seem to be eager to restrict or take away the pleasures of others it is surprising to read that the sons of the senate, after discussion, decided to leave to the Indian the delights of his peyote. The subject of peyote seemed to be new to many senators and several frankly asked what it was. Mr. Smoot hazarded the information that it was "a small bean." Mr. Ashurst said it was a drug and produces in the addict "a delusion of great wealth." Mr. Smoot added that its effect was like that of bad whiskey, and there would indeed seem to be a kinship, for many a whiskey-saturated "drunk" has been known to boast that he had "plenty of money and no poor kin." Mr. Jones of New Mexico quoted a man of Indian blood as saying that the effect of peyote was to bring about "a very beautiful state of mind," the "whole thought being centered upon everything that is beautiful and good." The senate's mouth watered, and when Mr. Smoot pointedly remarked that the Indians use peyote in their religious worship the $25,000 to curb the habit among them, with somewhat of constitutional warrant, was struck out of the Interior Appropriation bill.

But we may rest assured that this will not be the end of the matter. The reformers know that all joy is sinful and, for his own good, they will make sure that the Indian is left as little of it as possible. It will be cried from the housetops that an Omaha brave has incautiously confessed: "After eating 36 of these peyote I got just like drunk, only more so, but more good than when I drink whiskey." Zealous regulators will discover that Padre Jose Ortega of Barcelona called the peyote in 1754—for it is no new thing—"the devil's root," and that Bernardino Sabagun, writing in 1569, described it as "an evil mushroom which intoxicates like wine." Obviously the senate's temporary tolerance will not avail to save the peyote. The Indian will have to give it up.

It is rather surprising to hear that "hunger-mad" packs of timber wolves "threaten to cross" the Canadian border and invade the northern part of the United States. The news article further relates: "Scores of packs of huge wolves are playing havoc among game and farm animals in Ontario. Two mail carriers recently were attacked and killed near Lake Nipissing and the remains of a trapper and two Indians devoured by wolves were found by hunters not long ago. The largest and most ferocious of all species of timber wolves are found in Canada and some parts of Alaska, where they already have destroyed entire herds of caribou, and the game warden has appealed to the Department of Agriculture for trained killers." W. T. Hornaday, director of the Bronx Zoo in New York, is quoted as saying that this seemingly rapid increase in the number of wolves is due to the "low price" of furs, two years ago wolf skins bringing $20 to $60 in New York and now only $5 to $19. For this reason "it is not profitable to hunt wolves for the pelts alone."

Answers to Previous Questions.
1. How many broods do bluebirds have?
Often two, and occasionally three. The female lays new eggs when the early brood is able to use the wings, and turns the young birds over to the male for a short time, until he has taught them to find their own food.

2. Are cactus plants found in all dry hot countries?
No; the family to which cacti belong, Cactaceae, is confined to America, and not wholly to hot dry regions at that. Some kinds are found as far north as British Columbia, and they are known also in Colorado. There is one genus, Rhipsalis, originally found in tropical America, which has spread to Africa, the island of Mauritius, and Ceylon. It resembles mistletoe somewhat.

3. What makes humus in the soil?
Humus is decayed vegetable or animal matter, a great deal of which is prepared by earthworms. Dead leaves, for instance, are seized by earthworms and pulled into their burrows, where they are torn to bits, passed through the digestive tract of the worm, mixed with fluids in its body, and thus enriched, mixed with earth cast by the worm. Humus has the ability to absorb moisture and ammonia from the atmosphere, thus securing two elements on which vegetation in its turn feeds.

A Liberal Education.

That man, I think, has had a liberal education who has been so trained in youth that his body is the ready servant of his will, and does with ease and pleasure all the work that, as a mechanism, it is capable of; whose intellect is a clear, cold, logic engine, with all its parts of equal strength and smooth working order; ready, like a steam engine, to be turned to any kind of work, and spin the gears of the mind; whose mind is stored with knowledge of the great fundamental truths of nature and of the laws of her operations; one who, no stunted ascetic, is full of life and fire, but whose passions are trained to come to heel by a vigorous will, the servant of a tender conscience; who has learned to love all beauty, whether of nature or of art, to hate all villainy, and to respect others as himself.—T. H. Huxley.

Food Refuse Clue to Cavemen.
If cavemen had not been so accommodating as to leave their remains in caves, we should be without clues regarding the human inhabitants of Europe thousands of years ago. Marett, the anthropologist, tells of a cave in Jersey, near the Bay of St. Brelaide, where scientists dug down through some 20 feet of clay and rock rubbish, probably carried there in the course of the last Ice age that mantled Europe, and discovered a prehistoric hearth with the large stones that had propped up the fire, and even some of the ashes. Bones were found in a heap of food-refuse, which, when examined, proved to be the remains of the woolly rhinoceros, the reindeer, two kinds of horses, of a wild ox and of a deer. Thirteen human teeth were found in the food-besp. The diners had also left their knives—flint chipped on one side.

The Black Wall.

When first I knew my death was at hand I stood facing the blank, black wall; sobbing I hammered at it and set teeth and clenched fist attempting to knock it down. To my vain and tired effort it seemed but to increase in gloom and immovability, until my tear-dimmed eye perceived intrenched there not only the lawful strength of immutable death, but greediness for its prey, the longing to crush me at once, even before my time. Then I revolted against so much unnecessary cruelty and turned from it in disgust. I vowed that wall should not crush me. Bad enough to die at my age! While life is mine I mean to live.—From "Words in Pain," anonymous letters of a dying Englishwoman to her physician.

WHY

Name "Devil Fish" Is Appropriate for Sea Monster

Many authors have written thrilling descriptions of the devil fish, and although scientists declare that usually these accounts are exaggerated, they admit that the creature has many curious features.

The devil fish varies in length from 1 inch to 50 feet, but very few specimens of the largest kind have been found, and none of these was in perfect condition owing to the fierce attacks of whales and other monsters of the deep.

They are provided with suckers arms or tentacles, with which they catch the small fish on which they live. These arms are tremendously strong, and, in addition, the devil fish is armed with a sharp parrotlike beak. In spite of these formidable weapons, however, the creature, while cruel, are very timid and easily cowed, says a writer in London Tit-Bits.

The smaller devil fish swim in shoals, and as they move they change their color according to their surroundings. They have another device which enables them to escape when hard pressed. This is the ink bag, by means of which they can pour out a dark fluid which makes the sea around them thick and cloudy.

In appearance the devil fish is a loathsome creature, for its long, writhing arms and fixed, stony stare are terrifying in the extreme.

Besides being able to swim, it can crawl along the sea bottom on its feelers. It lies in some crack in the rocks and as soon as a fish passes its hiding place its feelers shoot out with amazing speed. Once the suckers have touched the victim there is no escape, and it is drawn quickly into the great mouth.

BURROUGHS NEVER A "MIXER"

Why Great Naturalist Preferred the Current of His Own Thoughts to Any Company.

I was an odd one, but I shared all the family infirmities. In fact, I have always been an odd one amid most of my human relations in life. Place me in a miscellaneous gathering of men, and I separate from them or they from me, like oil from water.

I do not mix readily with my fellows. I am not conscious of drawing into my shell, as the saying is, but I am conscious of a certain strain put upon me by those about me. I suppose my shell or my skin is too thin. Burbank experimented with walnuts, trying to produce one with a thin shell, till he finally produced one with so thin a shell that the birds ate it up. Well, the birds eat me up for the same reason, if I don't look out.

I am social, but not gregarious. I do not thrive in clubs, I do not smoke, or tell stories, or drink, or dispute, or keep late hours. I am usually as solitary as a bird of prey, though I trust not for the same reason. I love so much to float on the current of my own thoughts, I mix better with farmers, workers, and country people generally, than with professional or business men. Birds of a feather do flock together, and if we do not feel at ease in our company we may be sure we are in the wrong flock.—John Burroughs in Harper's Magazine.

How Air Specimens Are Secured.

The instrument used by a French scientist for collecting specimens of air at high altitudes with the aid of sounding balloons consists of a very perfect vacuum tube with a finely drawn out end. Either the rise of the mercury in a barometer, corresponding with a previously determined altitude, or the clockwork of the meteorograph, form an electric contact, causing a little hammer to fall and break the end of the tube. Air then rushes in, whereupon another electric contact, brought about by the same means, causes the current of a small accumulator to heat the platinum wire wound around the capillary tube to a red heat. This fuses the glass and again closes the end of the vacuum tube, thus entrapping the air.

Why Termed Eavesdropper.

Everybody knows, of course, that eavesdropping means the practice of stealthily trying to overhear other persons' conversation. The origin of the phrase leads us back to the beginnings of the laws of real estate.

According to the old Saxon code no one owning land could cultivate it or build on it within a certain fixed distance of its boundary. Here we have the start of what today we call "restriction."

The strip thus left was called the "eavesdrip." An "eavesdropper" or "eavesdropper" was one who stood in the "eavesdrip" to listen to a conversation inside the neighboring dwelling.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Why the Sea Is Salt.

The sea is salt because all the rivers in the world are carrying salt from the rocks and the soil to the ocean and leaving it there. The water is evaporated by the sun, but the salt remains behind, and so the ocean is becoming more salt as the years go on. Some lakes and seas are in like condition, as witness the Dead Sea in Palestine, which is very salty, because the River Jordan carries salt into it, but there is no river flowing out of it, and the salt keeps gathering all the time.

Why It Is Called "Penknife."

Our ancestors, when they wanted to write, used goose-quills, which had to be sharpened from time to time as they wore away. Hence clerks and other writers carried small knives, which became known as penknives.

Harding, First Lady of the Land, for whom millions prayed when she was so critically ill, will be sufficiently strong to go South with the President on March 6. She has practically abandoned the use of her invalid's chair.

Can France Force Germany To Pay?

The sudden withdrawal of the last thousand of the American soldiers from the Rhine is interpreted by many Washington correspondents and editorial observers as an emphatic protest on the part of the United States Government against France's invasion of the Ruhr Basin and seizure of "productive guaranties" for the payment of Germany's reparations debt. This attitude on the part of official Washington, it is generally agreed, is due neither to sympathy for Germany nor lack of it for France, but to a conviction that the seizure of guaranties will not solve the reparations problem, and that it opens the door to a host of disastrous possibilities, chief among which is another world war.

Many American papers, on the other hand, wholeheartedly applaud France or resorting to a show of force, "the only language that Germany understands"; and they predict that her course will be fully justified by the results. The German-language press in the United States is pessimistic. "In taking from Germany her richest industrial district the French will deprive themselves of the last chance to get any further reparations," declares the Philadelphia Tageblatt, which thinks that the results of the Ruhr invasion will amount to "French suicide as well as unspeakable misery and chaos for Germany, and possibly civil war in the Reich." Other German-language papers express similar convictions.

Where Do Jokes Originate?

Some one has said that there are only seven original jokes in the world. If this is so, what a vast amount of thought must be expended in furnishing mirth-loving America with material. First and foremost among those who keep the public good natured are the newspaper "Wits" and what is known as typical American humor must be based upon their efforts. The best jokes, the cleverest epigrams, the most humorous incidents as they are printed in the press of the world are eagerly scanned each week by The Literary Digest editors and a selection of them presented upon the screen in motion-picture theaters under the heading "Fun From the Press." This new short reel creates unbounded laughter wherever it is shown. Many hundreds of theaters have booked it and we would suggest that you attend the theater in your locality where "Fun From the Press" is advertised and you will enjoy good entertainment. It is produced by The Literary Digest and distributed to theaters by W. W. Hodgkinson Corporation.

Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon

The Duke of York, second son of the British rulers, will wed a commoner, rather than marry outside the British Isles. His bride, it is officially announced in London, will be Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the rather poor Earl of Strathmore, of the Scottish peerage. It is an unusual coincidence that no member of the British royalty in the past 150 years has married save in the Scottish peerage, unless the bride happened to be a foreign princess. Lady Elizabeth, who is 22, was bridesmaid to Princess Mary, the Duke's sister. The Duke of York is 27. He proposed three times—once while dancing, once while golfing and the third and last time while horseback riding.

For a choice special collection of Netherlands stamps covering the years from 1852 to 1897, inclusive, $151 was paid. There were 179 stamps in the collection, nine being on original envelopes.

COLLECTOR PAYS $1,000 FOR RARE U. S. STAMP

First 10-Cent Stamp of 1847 Had Been Cut in Two to Pay 5-Cent Postage.

A United States postage stamp, said to be the only copy in existence, was purchased for $1,000 recently at an auction sale held in New York. The name of the buyer was not announced, but it is stated that he has one of the best collections of the United States stamps in the country.

The rarity was a horizontal half of the first 10-cent stamp issued by the United States in 1847. A 5-cent stamp was issued in the same year, but the user of the stamp sold evidently had no 5-cent stamps when he mailed his letter from Baltimore, so he carefully cut the 10-cent stamp in two pieces and used one of the halves to pay the 5-cent letter postage. The stamp was on the original envelope. Had it not been on the envelope the stamp would probably not be recognized as genuine. A few copies of the 10-cent variety have been cut vertically and diagonally to serve for 5-cent postage and they are valued from $200 to $250.

An inverted center copy of the first United States airplane stamp, 24 cents, crimson and blue, issued in 1918, sold for $515. It was unused, but not perfectly centered. For a 4-cent Columbian issue, 1898, printed in blue, the wrong color, $111 was paid. This was slightly higher than the standard catalogue price, but it was a superb unused copy. An unused copy of the 24-cent, 1890 issue, with wide margins, sold for $125. An imperforate copy of the 4-cent brown, 1902 issue, but with oblong perforations at the sides privately applied for machine use, sold for $83. Only 24 copies of this odd variety are known.

ONE JAP DREAM IS SHATTERED

Marked by Relinquishment of Teintao Leasehold.

CAME TO LIFE 24 YEARS AGO

Snatched From Its Existence as a Shabby Fishing Village Germany Spent Sixty Millions to Transform It Into "Spotless Town" to Serve as Gateway to German Kultur and Commerce—Taken Over by Japan at Outbreak of War and Again Transformed.

"The relinquishment of Teintao and the Kiaochow leasehold by Japan recently, and its subsequent troubles with Chinese handits mark the passing of one dream of Japanese expansion in the Flowery Kingdom, just as the surrender of the same territory to Japan almost exactly eight years ago marked the tragic end of the dream of German imperialism in the country," remarks a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"This 200-square-mile slice of famous old Shantung," continues the bulletin, "for millenniums had little in its lot to distinguish it from similar sleepy patches of China's coast country. Suddenly it awoke 24 years ago with the world's spotlight beating fully upon it. It has been in the glare ever since; the bone of contention of empires, and an object for powerful if immaterial diplomatic forces and ultimatums, when it was not the target for all too material naval guns and their high explosive shells.

From Shabbiness to Prosperity.

Teintao, the port of the Kiaochow leasehold, has been a veritable Cinderella among oriental communities—and to mix the metaphor, a chameleon nationally. Snatched from its existence as a shabby fishing village it was made into a "Spotless Town," to serve first as a gateway for German Kultur and commerce; and later as an entrepot for Japanese influence and goods.

"When Germany decided to compete with other European nations that were taking possession of slices of Chinese territory, and landed her forces at Teintao in 1898, it consisted of little more than a narrow main street lined by low Chinese buildings with paper windows and straw roofs.

"Once on the ground the Germans worked feverishly at making over the village and constructing the combination of 'Little Berlin' and 'German Hongkong' of which they dreamed. Chinese houses were taken over and made clean; and temporary barracks were built, followed by permanent ones. Wide streets and avenues were laid out and lined with shade trees; substantial business buildings and residences rose. Drainage systems were established and other sanitary measures taken, and a supply of pure water was piped in from the hills. Massive granite breakwaters and piers were constructed; the harbor was dredged to a depth to accommodate the largest ships. A huge floating dock capable of accommodating merchantman or warship provided the finishing touch which made the once sleepy little Teintao into a full-fledged commercial and naval base and outpost of empire.

"By the outbreak of the World war Teintao represented a brilliant result of 'German efficiency.' Sixty million dollars had been spent in the transformation. An excellent railroad tapped the interior of Shantung, mines were being opened and shipping was steadily increasing. Of the city itself the Germans, who then numbered more than 4,000 shopkeepers, professional men and other civilians, in addition to the military, boasted with considerable justification that it was 'a paradise on earth.'

From Little Berlin to Little Tokyo.

"The character of this most German of towns was changed in 1914 almost as radically and as quickly as a motion picture setting is transformed from a representation of London to one of New York. The German flag came down in November and most of the Germans were sent to Japan as prisoners. Civilian Japanese as well as soldiers poured in; and while the architecture of 'Little Berlin' remained for the most part unaltered, the whole atmosphere of the place became that of Japan. On their part the Japanese displayed greater energy even than had the Germans, to give the city its second transformation. There, amid the incongruous German buildings, blossomed the influence and culture of Nippon. Indeed the Japanese were more thorough than their predecessors. By the middle of 1920 more than 28,000 Japanese had moved to the city. Schools had been established for teaching Chinese to the newcomers, as well as the regular system of lower and higher Japanese public schools. Commerce through the port grew amazingly, most of the ships flying the Japanese flag.

"Teintao is remote from America, but through commerce it has its contacts with this country. When you see a suit of Shantung silk on a summer day, the chances are high that the fabric took ship at Teintao; and tons of the almost invisible hair nets that hold America's unbobbed hairline tresses in place also start their journey at this German-Japanese port which in name now becomes Chinese."

An Outstanding Achievement

All motor cars may, with one exception, be divided into two classes.

There is the class of cars built to a price, and there is the class built regardless of price.

In the first, quality is sacrificed;—in the second, value.

The exception referred to is the Hupmobile,—a car which any experienced, independent garage mechanic will tell you is as finely built, in all the essentials, as any fine car; and which is priced so low as to make it, in our opinion, the greatest motor car value in the world.

EASY TO MAKE SELF-FEEDERS

Devices May Be Constructed of Any Size Desired and With Any Number of Compartments.

In response to requests for instructions
for making self-feeders for hogs
W. H. Underwood, in Farm and Ranch, gives the following directions, the illustration giving a general idea of what the feeder looks like:

The illustration shows a hinged lid made of 1 by 4-inch boards, one lid being on each side of the top of the feeder.
The dotted lines show the four compartments, three of the compartments being used for feed and the other for a mineral mixture. The outside of the feeder is covered with common siding such as is used in house building, the siding being nailed on the outside of the frame and the end boards nailed on the outside. The frame is made of 2 by 4-inch material. One by 4-inch boards hinged at ends swing free from about 1 1/2 inches from the bottom of the trough. The hogs root these boards
when the feed is not coming fast; enough or when feed is lodged on the side of the feeder. The troughs are Home-Made Self-Feeder for Hogs.

made of heavy boards. A trough is on each side with a partition in the center.
The platform is made of 2 by 4 pieces and heavy plank. The feeder is 12 feet long, 5 feet high and 3 feet wide at the top of the compartments.

One farmer wants to know if the feeder should be made on a concrete foundation. No, that is not necessary.
But build it on a good, solid, firm wood foundation, and then when you want to move it from one place to another you can easily do so with a horse or mule.
About 16 average size hogs can eat at the same time at the feeder shown in the accompanying sketch. Of course feeders may be made any size desired and with any number of compartments.
When you have finished making a feeder give it a good coat of paint. It pays to keep such things around the farm well painted.

PROTEIN FOR YOUNG ANIMALS

One of Three Elements Necessary in Order That They May Thrive—Proportion Varies.

Protein is one of the three elements in feeds that are necessary in order that animals may thrive. The proportion of protein in feeds necessary for best results varies with the age and character of the animal being fed. For young and growing animals, and those bearing young or producing milk, an average of one pound of protein to five or six pounds of other constituents is about right.

SEMI-ANNUAL SWINE SURVEY

Questionnaires Will Be Distributed on Agricultural Routes by Rural Mail Carriers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The second semi-annual pig survey, cards for which are now being distributed to rural mail carriers, will cover the entire country, the United States Department of Agriculture has announced. The survey last spring covered only 17 states, but as an indication of present and probable pig production the survey was a great success and readily demonstrated the feasibility of extending the scope of the inquiry, says the department.

Ten cards or questionnaires will be distributed by each rural mail carrier on agricultural routes. Approximately 50,000 cards will be sent out. They have been prepared in simple form
and can be filled out in a few minutes.
Where possible, the mail carriers will fill in the answers as made by the hog raisers. The cards will show the number of sows farrowed during the last six months of 1932, the number farrowed during the first six months of 1933,
the number of sows farrowed, of 1932,
the number during the last six months of 1932, and the number bred or intended to be bred to farrow during the first six months of 1933.

The importance of this survey to the farmers in enabling them to adjust their production to the probable needs of the market is stressed by the department. People who deal in crops and live stock, such as packers and commission men, have very extensive organizations for informing themselves of the production of crops and live stock, the department points out.
"Farmers have no such organization of their own, and obviously information of this character is just as important to the farmers as to the people who deal in farm products. One of the functions of government is to gather and publish these necessary statistics in order that the producers may have some knowledge of what is going on in the way of production."

SIMPLE WAY TO TIE HORSES

Method Illustrated Obviates Danger of Animals Getting Legs Over the Rope.

The accompanying diagram shows a simple but effective method of tying horses and colts so there is no danger of their getting their legs over the tie rope and throwing themselves or strangling, says a writer in the Prairie Farmer. This is one of the con-

Hitch for Horse.

stant dangers on the farm, especially where the barn is some distance from the house.

Have a snap at the halter and of the rein, then run the other end of the rope through the hole in the manger and tie on a large ring or almost anything which will act as a light weight and which cannot get in such a way that it can be pulled through the hole. When the horse stands close to the manger the ring will go down and thus there will be no chance for him to get his foot over the rein.

COSTS OF MILK PRODUCTION

Bulletin Issued by University of Wisconsin Gives Good Information for Dairyman.

Not many dairymen are thoroughly familiar with the big question of the variation in the cost of producing milk.
"Milk costs are necessary in order to determine profits or losses of the herd," say P. E. McNall and D.
R. Mitchell in their new bulletin, "Why Costs of Milk Vary," which has just been issued by the University of Wisconsin. "Costs per hundredweight of milk varied from $1.88 to $4.01 for different months of the year." Such facts as these are brought out in the new bulletin, which contains valuable information for the practical dairyman who is trying to hold down production costs.

Excellent Hog Pasture.
Medium red clover makes excellent hog pasture. So does alfalfa. It is usually easier to get clover started, particularly on new land, than alfalfa.

Pasturage for Swine.
Pasturage should be provided for the entire year for brood sows and spring and fall litters.

Gives Needed Exercise.
Gardening affords needed exercise
for many "tired business men."

SHEEP ARE EASY TO DOCTOR

Hundreds Die Each Year That Might Have Been Saved If Owner Had Taken Little Pains.

Sheep are easiest doctored of all our domestic animals. Hundreds of sheep die each year that might easily have been saved if the owner had gone to a little trouble. A sheep is very easy to drench. Why lose one?
However, the best of all medicines is that given for prevention.

Burn the Garden Trash.
Troublesome garden insects and animals may be partly controlled by burning or removing remains of crops after the harvest season.

Money Combination.
The sow and the cow is a money-making combination. Add corn and alfalfa and the mixture is well-nigh invaluable.

More and Better Products.
It is good farm economy to grow
more and better products at less cost.

South Africa Easily In Lead.
South African diamond fields yield about 98 per cent of the total product.

Junior Holy Name League.

Due to the regents examinations,
which are to be conducted in high

week all basketball games in St.
Mary's League will be discontinued for that period. The boys will defor February 15th and 16th.

In last evening's series Donald Murphy, in his initial appearance as a leaguer broke the league record for points in a single game, playing a fast, all-around good game for the Tipperary five. Donald rang up thirty-two points, thereby erasing Dan Joyce's record of twenty-six points. Johnny Boyle of the Daunt-

DEVELOPING HIGHWAYS SLOW

For Many Years Only Paved Roads
Were in Cities—Government
Finally Took Hold.

County and state governments took years to get momentum. For years the only paved highways were in the cities. Then ribbons of concrete and brick were extended through rural districts to other centers.

County and state governments took up the cause and then the nation got back of the movement with energy and funds.

In 1921 approximately 5,000 miles of concrete highways were completed and put into service in the United States. Pennsylvania alone built 640 miles; New York state 530 miles; Illinois 460 miles; Michigan and Wisconsin each about 340 miles; Ohio 280 miles, and other states have accomplished almost as much.

When the Best Brain Work is Done.

In general people's mental activity varies from season to season in the same way as physical activity, but there is an interesting difference in one respect. In the latitude of New York, for example, people do the best brain work about the end of November or beginning of December, that is,
a month or six weeks after their physical strength is greatest. In the spring, on the contrary, the best mental work is done in March, a month or two before the physical strength reaches the maximum. This means that people's minds are most stimulated in weather somewhat cooler than that which most stimulates their bodies.—
From "Principles of Human Geography."

There Are Dogs and Dogs.

Buster is five years old and is developing a spirit of independence and choice that his fond daddy loves to tell about. Buster is about to have a new birthday and daddy consulted him as to his desires in the direction of a birthday present. Buster without much deliberation asked for a dog.
"What kind of a dog do you want?"
asked daddy. Buster pondered awhile and then answered seriously: "I don't care what kind of a dog he is. He can be big or small or long haired or short haired or anything, but—"
and his voice took on a tone of finality,
"I don't want any jokes. The only kind of a dog I don't want is a 'hot dog'."

Royal English Poets.

An amusing bypath in English literature is the study of the poetry—
or verse—written by several of our kings and queens. Certainly the best of our royal poets was Henry VIII, if, as seems probable, we can accept the traditional attribution to him of several charming songs. But the most voluminous verse writer of them all was James I, who published two volumes of poetry, and left many things in manuscript. The subject is brought to our minds by the fact that the Bodleian Library has issued, as a supplement to its Quarterly Record, five poems by James I, printed in the Fell type from manuscripts in the library. . . . It is to be hoped that some scholar will one day give us a complete edition of the poems of the royal poet, who, though he was not a great poet, had at times a minor charm that is not unpleasant.—The Saturday Review.

Knighting the Roast of Beef.

Hoghton tower, near Preston, England, is one of the three places which claim to be the scene of the knighting by James I, in merry mood, of the loin of beef. In the hall of this mansion is a table with a brass plate stating that James I, on coming in, very hungry after hunting in the adjoining forest, found the beef so appetizing that he knighted it in appreciation.
while the banqueting hall at Hoghton

Lay's Saturday Sale

Come with the hundreds of other thrifty and wise housekeepers Saturday and embrace the savings chances we've arranged for that day's sale. Anticipate your meat and grocery needs for next week—buy in larger quantities and profit by lower prices. Many of our patrons find it prudent to look ahead, as wholesale quotations are erratic—up today and down tomorrow. Be forehanded and buy when you may do so profitably—Saturday, for instance. The savings items we present below make a strong appeal to those who would economize, and the prices, remember, are for Saturday only.
